

ADVANCE OF COTTON
POINTS IN COTTON

Support From Bulls and Trade Houses Causes Scoring of Gain.

HOLIDAY HERE TO-DAY

Leading bull interests were credited with taking advantage of the early decline in yesterday's cotton market. There seemed to be buying of a good character and a 10 point recovery was scored. Much of the absorption of contracts was in reflection of the bullish tenor of the spot market from the South. Several authorities wired that the reports of large concessions granted by farmers were mythical and in reality holders of actual cotton were loath to sell at about the current basis.

The actual hedging from Southern quarters was of inconsequential volume. There appeared to be more or less Southern selling at the start, when prices were slightly under the final last week but the pressure was short lived. Professional shorts were inclined to cover their commitments and there were some stop losses reached on the short side. The outside demand was of the Wall Street and not a little of the short buying was associated with the inherent strength of the stock market.

The advice from abroad were rather bullish, but had very little influence here. Chaotic conditions in the Balkans and the Russian situation were the main points of the foreign market. The Liverpool list as having been caused by the increased hedge offerings. There were other cables which suggested that speculative demand abroad had quieted. It is realized that the Liverpool market has not been the leader and that the demand for cotton has been steady with the changes here, although the abnormal freight situation and foreign exchange conditions make for a considerable volume of straddling.

The extent of the demand from spinners during yesterday's session was a matter of conjecture. It was the consensus that the outlook was of the small in years. Weather reports were not altogether reassuring inasmuch as some local points in the East suffered from heavy rain. The advance in the market was checked by the profit taking for the day and the selling for cotton holders.

Oats—The undertone was quite strong, with some fresh speculative buying. The market was partly inspired by the strength of the grain market and the fact that the price of oats was higher than that of corn. The market was steady, with some fresh speculative buying.

Evening operations closed irregularly in the hands of the market. The New York Cotton Exchange will not hold a session to-day, but the usual sessions will be held at New Orleans and Liverpool.

Future closed steady.
